Do you Know that Confusion is a common sign of UTI in seniors?

Common medical conditions can cause seniors to suddenly show dementia-like symptoms or cause existing dementia symptoms to worsen significantly. One of the most common is a urinary tract infection (UTI).

It is crucial to understand that the commonly associated symptoms of a UTI like a burning sensation when peeing and abdominal pain are not necessarily what an elderly person will experience who has an infection. Older adults typically have weaker immune systems that cannot mount a defense quite like a younger person, so you're not going to necessarily see fever, sweating, chills, and pain either. Instead, you may recognize signs that seem more like dementia or cognitive decline including:

- Confusion and disorientation
- Behavior changes
- Hallucinations
- Loss of coordination
- Dizziness
- Poor motor skills
- Frequent falling

Instead, you may find out older adults have an infection because there's a sudden change in behavior. Someone who suddenly can't do something they could a week ago might have a UTI. Falls, recent incontinence, or loss of appetite can also be signs of an infection.

If someone already has Alzheimer's or dementia, they may also show sudden, unexplained behavior changes when they have this infection.

Even though dementia is a progressive disease and symptoms do change over time, it's a good idea to check for an infection when sudden changes happen. It can make someone with dementia more agitated, difficult, confused, or less responsive than usual.

If your older adult suddenly starts acting strangely, take them to the doctor to get checked out right away. UTIs can be detected with simple blood tests or with a urine sample.

HaPpy BiRthDay APRIL Born

- They are Nosy, People born in this month are famous for being very curious. They want to know everything that's happening and won't stop till they know what they need.
- They are Daring, No one else is as daring and adventurous as people born in this month. They hate living a boring, dull, tedious and repetitious life.
- They are Risk-Taker, based on the previous point, we can say that April borns are bold and are not afraid to take any risk. Nothing is impossible for them.
- They are Independent, they prefer to do things on their own when no one gives them orders or rules. They need their privacy and freedom.
- They are Talented, there is no field that they are not successful in or the skills that they don't have. They are interested in everything, from engineering to art and sports.
- They are Active, you might never see them just lying and doing nothing. They are very energetic and engaged in many tasks and hobbies.
- They are Romantic, if they go into a relationship they engage completely, if they love someone, they give the maximum of themselves. And they show it on every step.
- They are a Great Friend; friendships are more important than anything! They value people that are close to them very much.
- They are Impatience; As we have already said, they are energetic and very curious. Their need of finding and having answers to all their questions is so strong that they want to have them fast and right away.
